BRITISH PROVERBS.

They who Love most are least set by.
he who marrieth for Wealth doth sell his liberty.

Love lives in Cottages as well as in Courts.

A low hedge is easily leapt over.

The Nightingale and the Cuckoo sing both in the same month.

many speak much that cannot speak well.

Henry Alken del et sculp.

London Published by E.& C.M.c Lean, 1824.

BRITISH PROVERBS.

The horse thinks one thing and the man that rides him another.

God help the rich the poor may beg.

Drunken fools seldom take harm

It's bad sport that will not afford a Candle.

They are poor hearts that never rejoice.

Henry Aiken del et sculp.

London Published by E. & C. Mc Lean, 1824.

BRITISH PROVERBS.

All things are soon prepar'd in a well Order'd house.

A man never surfeits of too much honesty.

It's not how long but how well we live.

The last Suitor wins the Maid.

Henry Aiken. del. et fculp.

London. Published by E & C M.Lean. 1824.

BRITISH PROVERBS.

Good to begin well_better to end well.
Bad luck now_better another time.

Who hath a fair wife needs more than two eyes.
A discreet woman should have neither eyes nor ears.

In the end things will mend.
He that endureth is not overcome.

The further we go the further behind.

Take heed you find not that you do not seek.

BRITISH PROVERBS

Life without a Friend is death with a witness

When a friend asketh there is no to morrow.

What your glass tells you, you will not be told by counsel.

He giveth twice that gives in a trice.

Happy is he who knows his follies in his youth.

The greatest strokes make not the best music.
